

Mont Orgueil Castle in the 13th century

This is how we think Mont Orgueil may have looked in the late 13th century. The dotted lines represent missing walls and towers. We have based this plan on what we know medieval castle builders would have done.

Although history is primarily about evidence, at times we also have to rely on other things: hunches, imagination, interpretation, and even guesswork.